

The Virginia Tech Students for Non-Violence

cordially invite you to an

Open House

September 3, 2007

7:30 PM

205 Norris Hall

Refreshments will be provided

Students for Non-Violence (SNV) is the student-run affiliate of the Center for Peace Studies and Violence Prevention, created in the wake of the tragedy of April 16, 2007, to foster a climate of peace at Virginia Tech and in the community near and far.

Our Vision:

To be a united and focused community, cultivating peace and non-violence through compassion, awareness, and service.

Our Mission:

To serve the university, local, and global communities by:

- Promoting peace and non-violence through education
- Accepting diversity
- Creating opportunities for action

SNV members raised over $4,000 in a Pennies for Peace campaign to build girls' schools in Afghanistan and Pakistan!

SNV member Caty Gordon smiles with world-renowned humanitarian Greg Mortenson during his visit to Va. Tech on April 16, 2009

This year we plan to have an extremely active calendar, including ongoing community outreach and philanthropic events, high-profile guest speakers from the world of public policy and humanitarianism, and hands-on involvement in shaping policies involving the safety of our campus. We encourage students, faculty and staff to come learn how they can get involved in this year's activities and make a real difference!

For more information, contact Melissa Lyden, President of Students for Non-Violence at mjlyden@vt.edu or (703) 915-9982